Bon Anniversaire

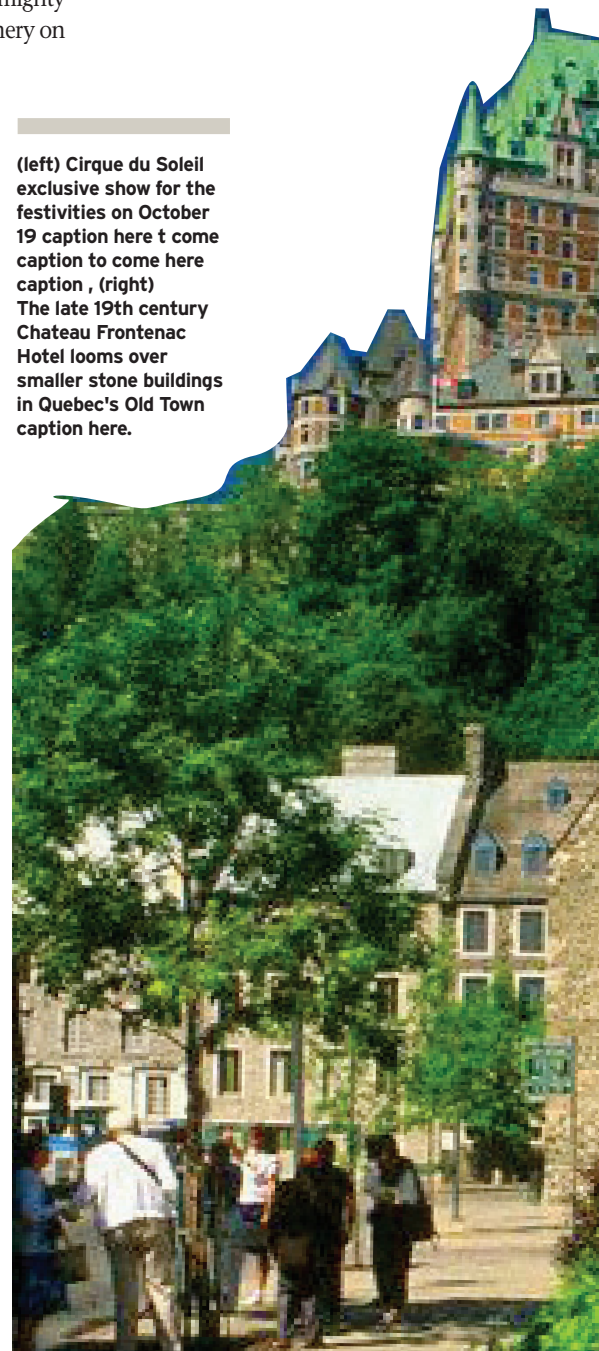

Quebec City celebrates 400 years

ON JULY 3, 1608, French map-maker and navigator Samuel de Champlain stepped ashore at Cap Diamant, an outcrop overlooking the St. Lawrence River. As he set about fortifying the area, little did Champlain know that the fledgling settlement, christened Quebec, would become the heart of New France. • To commemorate the 400th anniversary of Champlain's arrival, Quebec City is throwing a year-long party throughout 2008. Highlights include "The Louvre in Quebec City: Arts and Life," an exhibit of art and antiquities on loan from the famed French gallery between June 5 and October 26; the eye-popping "Image Mill," where grain silos (nearly 600 metres long and 39 metres high) serve as huge projection screens for a light-and-sound extravaganza from June 20 to July 29; and a four-day urban opera in July featuring 1,000 artists. The closing gala on October 19 includes a performance by Cirque du Soleil produced especially for the event and projected onto a giant outdoor screen. • Aside from the anniversary revelry, visitors can soak up Old World charm at Quebec City's many vibrant cafés, galleries, churches and stone fortifications.
